

The Decade of Vaccines - Bill Gates continues his attempt to gain support
Tuesday, March 15, 2011 by: Paula Rothstein

(NaturalNews) In a recent interview with Dr. Sanjay Gupta, better known as the media's mouthpiece for big pharma, Bill Gates implored that 2010 be the "decade of vaccines". In this same interview Gates described those who question vaccine safety as child killers and his wife, Melinda Gates, declared vaccines to be "miraculous." She went on to say, "With just a few doses, they can prevent deadly disease for a lifetime"

Even the drug literature provided at a doctor's office would have alerted Melinda Gates to the fact that vaccines do not always provide immunity, and if they do, it will only be for a number of years. Only natural exposure to disease can provide lifetime immunity. This one comment gives you an idea as to how thoroughly this issue has been researched by Bill and Melinda Gates.

The focus of Bill Gates's 10-year program will be on vaccines for AIDS, tuberculosis, rotavirus and pneumonia. In an effort to make his dream of a vaccine infused third world a reality, Gates has pledged $10 billion to the development and distribution of vaccines through the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation. This is the largest contribution to a single cause ever made.

Bill Gates is an open advocate for global population reduction. He has spoken frankly regarding this issue on numerous occasions. So why would someone have his two most important issues be in direct conflict with each other? Is it because the resolution of one issue inherently lies in the opposing issue's realization? In other words, an aggressive vaccine program would actually cause infertility, death and disease.

The Global Health Council lists pneumonia, diarrhea and malaria as the leading causes of death in children under five years of age in developing countries. However, it would be more accurate to say that malnutrition and poor access to quality drinking water are the reasons a child would be most at risk for infectious disease and diarrhea. If $10 billion dollars were invested in better nutrition, access to quality drinking water and sustainable farming, numerous lives would no doubt be saved. However, Bill Gates would rather have these children injected with toxins such as aluminum, formaldehyde, African green monkey cells and MSG.

Bill Gates chooses to ignore valid independent studies that indicate there are causal links between the damage done by vaccines and the vaccines received. The picture of chronic disease of children as recent as the 1950's was almost non-existent. At the present time, nearly half of our children suffer with some form of a chronic disease during childhood and one in four is condemned to a lifetime of disease. This dramatic rise in the rate of childhood disease directly mirrors the introduction of more and more vaccines to the CDC's aggressive schedule.

The health of children in developed countries is in a rapid state of decline. One has to stop and wonder what vaccinations will do to children already malnourished and incapable of sustaining the onslaught of toxins contained in vaccines. The result could be devastating with a vast surge in numbers of the dead - numbers that will be swept under the rug, or simply denied. Those responsible for the deaths of innocent children will shrug their shoulders and move on to the next item on their agenda.

If Bill Gates needs to express outrage on behalf of children, perhaps he could declare 2010 to be the decade autism is eradicated and seriously be of assistance. Bill Gates's money is placed right where he wants it to be. That of global population reduction in developing countries.
