

Swine Flu – Truth Finally Emerging

"The Citizens Have Won", says Dr Marc Girard: Victory in Swine Flu Information War Made Possible By Internet - Friday, 08 January 2010 12:08

French doctor and author of a book on the swine flu scam, Marc Girard, has declared victory in the information battle in Europe surrounding the swine flu vaccine following the decision by the French government to cancel 50 million doses and abandon the vaccine centers under intense political pressure.

Some other key turning points in the campaign were:

*the decision by the German army in September to refuse to take the toxic Baxter Celvapan jab forcing Baxter to drop mercury and adjuvants at the last moment when seeking EU approval for its vaccine and so triggering a storm of protest inside Germany about the two classes of vaccines with and without adjuvants.

*protests by Belgium citizens groups stopping a parliamentary law allowing forced vaccination to go through.

*the announcement by the Polish Health Minister and family doctor Ewa Kopacz that she would order the inadequately tested jab for Poland

*the legal action by Marc Vercoutere and Christian Cotton that forced French Health Minister Roselyne Bachelot to start to account, through her lawyer, in a Paris court on January 4th for the swine flu campaign irregularities.

"In the flu affair, by the sole force of the internet and an unprecedented majority, the citizens have won: against the lobbies supported by the large media, and in spite of the objective collusion of all the politicians - including those who are today calling for a commission of inquiry. The time has already come to think about the time after the flu and to reflect on the factors that allowed such a scandal possible."

"Dans l'affaire de la grippe, par la seule force d'internet et à une majorité sans précédent, les citoyens ont gagné : contre les lobbies soutenus par tous les grands médias, et malgré la collusion objective de tous les politiques – incluant ceux qui réclament aujourd'hui une commission d'enquête. Il est déjà temps de penser l'après-grippe et de réfléchir aux facteurs qui ont rendu possible un tel scandale. Réalisée dans des conditions techniques précaires imposées par une situation que tout le monde connaît, la vidéo qui suit vise à susciter une réflexion citoyenne sur la question centrale des conflits d'intérêts.

Translation:

"In the business of the influenza, by the only force of Internet and with a majority without precedent, the citizens gained: against the lobbies supported by all the great media, and in spite of the objective collusion of all the policies - including those which claim a board of inquiry today. It is already time to think the after-influenza and to think of the factors which made possible such a scandal. Realized under precarious technical conditions imposed by a situation that everyone knows, it video which follows aims at causing a reflexion citizen on the central question of the conflicts of interests.

<http://www.rolandsimion.org/spip.php?article108> Bonne écoute – bonne réflexion... Marc Girard"

However, while we, in Europe, have beyond a doubt achieved a fantastic victory, much remains to be done to stop the swine flu jabs being sent to developing countries, among other things.

Also, we need to start legal actions and insist on parliamentary inquiries to identify those responsible for this scam.

Since this is the same international corporate crime syndicate organised around the Bilderbergs that is also responsible for Codex Alimentarius, GMO foods, poisoning us through water and other means, as well as for the financial crisis and instigating numerous false flag terrorist attacks and wars (Afghanistan, Iraq and now Yemen), there is a unique opportunity to deal with a multitude of problems by systematically dismantling the power structure of this group.